REPORT OF MR. UNDERHILL.

By the direction of the Committee we have the pleasure of laying before our readers the following closing Report of Mr. Underhill, on his return from India:--

To the Treasurer and Committee of the Baptist Missionary Society.

DEAR BRETHREN,-The mission confided to me by your resolution of June 14, 1854, having been brought, in the Providence of God, to its termination, I now beg to lay before you, in addition to the six printed reports you have already received, a general report of the course I have taken in the discharge of the onerous responsibilities which, in accordance with your instructions, I had assumed.

And first, permit me to invite you to join me in an expression of gratitude to the God of mercies, who, in answer to your prayers and those of other Christian friends, has graciously preserved my life, and that of those beloved ones who have accompanied me in my numerous journeys. Many thousands of miles have been traversed by sea and land, the perils of a tropical climate have been encountered, exposure in desert and jungly places, amid races alike strange in person and speech, has been endured, and that with safety. In no one instance has there been interruption in the discharge of my duty. Through God's infinite lovingkindness I stand among you this day unharmed, with health and strength unimpaired, and with enlarged knowledge and experience.

Gratitude and joy are, however, usually tinged with sadness. They are to be found unalloyed only in heaven, and it is there alone that I can meet some of your number who were with us on earth when my journeys began. To one, more especially, may I be permitted to allude, whose handwriting appears at the foot of the Letter of Instructions with which you favoured me, and to whom this mission was a subject of the deepest interest. He is not here to receive the report of its accomplishment. Our late beloved Treasurer, Mr. Gurney, is now reaping the reward of his services on earth in the cause of our Lord and Master, to which, in life, he gave his best energies, and his ardent prayers. Personally I mourn the loss of his counsels, of his wide experience, of his prompt affection, and ever ready aid. The Society has been deprived of one of its chiefest men, alike wise in counsel and energetic in action. Often has he reanimated the hearts of the fainting in the hour of despondency, and by his liberality maintained the cause on which his heart was set. Others also have passed from your Council Board to the inner sanctuary, while some who had no part in the deliberations which led to this mission, now listen to the report of its accomplishment. So emphatically do the brief months that have elapsed since I parted from you teach that we "are not as yet come to the rest and to the inheritance" which the Lord our God giveth us.

In pursuance of your Letter of Instructions delivered to me on the 9th of August, 1854, I embarked at Southampton, on the 20th of September, accompanied by Mrs. and Miss Underhill, for Calcutta. After a safe and pleasant passage, we landed in India on the 2nd of November. A meeting of the missionary brethren in Calcutta a day or two afterwards, enabled me at once to lay before them the wishes of the Committee, and to confer with them on the best method and time for accomplishing the objects of my visit. I need scarcely say that I received a most cordial welcome, and as frank a response as could be desired to the frank explanation given of the views and plans of the Committee. Early in December was held a series of meetings of the Bengal Association of Baptist Churches, at which many of the missionaries were present. This permitted me to make immediate arrangements for visiting the stations, and to fix the time for a Conference with the brethren in the following year. Before commencing my tour, arrangements were also made for the investigation of the affairs of the Press in the month of April, 1855.

JOURNEYS.—Dacca, in the east of Bengal, was the first of the stations visited. Thence I proceeded to Chittagong. Returning on my steps to Dacca, I next went to Barrisal, threading with the missionaries the complex network of streams which characterizes the delta of the sacred Ganges, and penetrating in their company the great swamp which occupies the entire central region of this district, but which is everywhere filled with a dense population, living on small patches of land rescued from the surrounding waste. Various places in Jessore were next visited. After a stay of a few days in Calcutta, I hastened northwards to Birbhoom and Cutwa, and closed the tour of this season by a journey to the villages lying southward of Calcutta. The only station in Bengal left unvisited was that of Dinagepore, which place could more easily be reached on my return from the North-west Provinces.

It is unnecessary to trouble the Committee with the numerous details of these visits to the scenes of our missionary labours. At every station diligent inquiries were made into the spiritual and social condition of the people, the state of piety existing among the converts, the various modes of labour adopted by the brethren, and their comparative value and success, into the facilities for missionary labour among the surrounding population, and the supply of gospel preaching afforded them, the state of the country, and the general effect produced upon the heathen by the promulgation of the Word of God. The information thus gained, and the observations made, were treasured up for use at the proposed Conference later in the year. It was my endeavour to avoid the formation of hasty conclusions. The peculiarities of the country require much experience before one can venture to form definite opinions. Generally, however, it may be stated that my inquiries led me to form a high estimate of the character and labours of the missionaries—that if success has not yet followed commensurate with our wishes and prayers, it is not owing to any deficiency in zeal, or want of industry on their part, but to causes affecting all missions in India alike, and to some peculiar to the semicivilized and religious condition of the many nations inhabiting it. I could not but notice with regret how dependent the converts seemed to be upon the care and protection of the missionary, and how rare were the instances among them of a voluntary and ardent zeal for the extension of the blessings of the gospel to their perishing fellow-countrymen. This accordingly formed a frequent topic of discourse in the numerous meetings I had with them, and every occasion was seized to urge the duty of supporting the ministry of their native teacher, of providing for themselves the means of grace, and of communicating to others the knowledge of Christ. On the whole, however, I received favourable impressions of the piety of the converts. If the lamp burn feebly, it must not be forgotten how recently the people have emerged from a form of heathenism the most degrading and demoralizing the world has ever seen, and that they have to shake off the influence, and to be released from the shackles of superstitions which bind the whole nation as a child is bound in swathing bands. The means of instruction are few, books are rare, and in the country districts newspapers are entirely unknown. Internal communications can scarcely be said to exist, except in the rudest forms. Roads once made are often broken up, or intercepted by the rush and inundation of innumerable rivers. The poverty of the lower orders is great, among whom converts only, with few exceptions, have been made; and their efforts to rise are perpetually crushed by the hard tyranny of their landlords, the griping avarice of the usurer, and the painful want of security for both person and property. The guardians and administrators of the law are, alas! too often the most cruel oppressors. Escape from police torture and extortion is almost impossible.

A visit to Ceylon occupied the months of May, June, and July. Immediately after the Bengal Conference, which was held in Calcutta in the months of August and September, I proceeded to the North-west Provinces. Agra was reached in November, and I finally left that important city, the capital of the North-West, an hour after midnight of the last day of the year 1855. From Agra excursions were made to Delhi, Chitoura, Muttra, and the cities famed as the arena of the licentious exploits of the god Krishna. Benares occupied a fortnight in January, 1856. On our downward journey a stay was made at Patna and Monghyr, and I closed my inspection of the Society's missions in Northern India, by a visit to Dinagepore. The profit and instruction of this widely-extended journey were greatly increased by the opportunities I enjoyed of intercourse with missionaries of other bodies, and the very cordial communication of their views, and plans, and experience, with which they frankly and kindly favoured me. Conferences similar to the one in Bengal were held with our brethren of the North-west Provinces at Agra, and with those labouring in Behar, at Monghyr. My missionary journeys were finally closed by a visit to Burmah in the months of September and October last, in which I had the pleasure of observing the successful labours of our American brethren among the Burmans and Karens, and the wonderful work of grace proceeding amongst the latter people.

It is but my duty that I should express my deep and grateful sense of the kindness with which I was everywhere received, both by the missionaries of our own body, and of all other denominations. Every opportunity I could desire was afforded me to gather information; and to a very numerous circle of friends were myself and family indebted for acts of hospitality and attention which memory will not soon forget.

The Conferences.—At the Conferences above referred to, the entire range of missionary labour came under consideration. On every topic of interest, ample discussions were enjoyed, and with a degree of unanimity in result that could scarcely have been anticipated. Indeed, it may be stated that on the principles which should guide the missionary in his labours, there was an entire agreement of opinion. It was in the practical application of them that occasionally dissent was expressed, but that in a few instances only.

PREACHING.—Your missionaries with one voice affirm, that in their judgment the oral preaching of the Gospel is the instrument appointed by the Lord Jesus Christ for the conversion of men, and the communication to the heathen of his message of love. Education, literature, science, commerce, the arts of life, may each and all have their appropriate sphere and value in the civilization of mankind; but it is by the "foolishness of preaching," that the divine power of God displays itself in the regeneration of the soul. It was, however, stated that the direct result of missionary preaching in the streets of towns, the bazaars of villages, the crowded markets, and on the roadside, had not been so obvious as might perhaps be expected. Converts have indeed, in considerable numbers, been made; but they would appear not to have been directly, except in a few rare cases, the fruit of itinerant labours. Still it is not to be denied, that the oral preaching of the Word of God has widely diffused a knowledge of the gospel; that, in consequence of the general impressions thus made, numbers have sought the missionary, and through further instruction have yielded to the power of truth. Not a few have in secret cherished the seed, and sought gropingly after God, while the universal ignorance of the lower classes renders it impossible that in any other way they should become acquainted with the words of eternal life. Your mission in India has ever been prominently a preaching mission. With very few exceptions all your missionaries have been, and are, constantly engaged, as seasons and means of transit will permit, in itinerant I know of none who would discontinue their labours, or who think there should be the slightest relaxation of labour in this direction. It is earnestly desired by all that more numerous labourers should enter on this department of toil, and that increased means should be placed at their disposal to visit the countless towns and villages which cover the soil, where dwells a population which scarcely without figure may be said to be as numerous as the sands of the sea-shore. In this work any number of missionaries may be employed. The Christian churches of England, of the Continent of Europe, and of America, have, up to the present moment, provided a most inadequate supply. At the present rate, generations must elapse before the 60,000 towns and villages of Bengal, to say nothing of other populous regions, can be only once visited by the messenger of salvation. There is every reason for increased zeal on our part. The country is everywhere open, and with little labour accessible. The people will hear. Open hostility is dying away. Caste is shaken, and many social customs and institutions are gradually yielding to the influence of ideas originating in missionary instruction. Commerce, and with it intelligence, is rapidly extending, while the native press is every day acquiring fresh extension and increased power. Preachers having the spirit and power of Elias are alone wanting to shake to its foundation the decaying fabric of Hindooism. These God will surely raise up in answer to the prayers of his people.

Various practical questions having reference to the efficiency of the preacher, and of his preaching, did not escape the attention of the brethren in Conference. Thus it was thought prudent to avoid crowds intoxicated with the excitement attending a religious festival or busy market, and on such occasions to choose the earlier and more quiet portion of the day. Too great eagerness to shame the Hindoos and Mohammedans, by remarks on the follies of their respective beliefs, should not be displayed, while the missionary should, on the other hand, avoid a vague and too general statement and application of religious A fixed residence for the missionary has advantages in the truth. influence his character thus secures, and in the ready access it gives to inquirers; but it would be most desirable that he should have the opportunity and means of settling for a time in other localities which Divine Providence may open before him. It is rare to find established congregations of heathen auditors. To attend regularly the means of grace, demands a neglect of caste and a very considerable advance on the path to Christianity, on the part of the heathen, which, in the present stage of missionary labour, cannot be expected or attained. It is, nevertheless, desirable that Christian worship should be within reach, and not, as is often the case, conducted in buildings far removed from the people we desire to benefit. Serious difficulties to itinerancy are presented by the seasons, the inundations of the lowlands, and the intense heats of a tropical clime. Sometimes tents must be employed, at others boats are the only methods of traversing the country. The cost of travelling is beavy, and is increased by the necessity of taking food, bedding, indeed everything that the missionary can require. The efficiency of the missionary is much increased by the aid afforded by the native brethren. These converse with inquirers, assist in preaching in the bazaars, and form an easy medium of approach to the people on the part of the European instructor. The best methods of presenting the truth, the doctrines to be preached, the arguments most useful in controversy, and many other points, received the attention of the Conferences, and led to conclusions of a most helpful and instructive kind. The Committee are thus assured that every effort is made by their missionary brethren to secure the greatest efficiency in their evangelical labour of preaching the unsearchable riches of Christ.

Valuable and essential to the end in view as itinerancies and bazaar preaching confessedly are, it appeared to me that a closer appeal was wanted, a more direct bringing home of the truth to the consciences of individuals than those modes of missionary labour allow. With this view, I frequently urged upon the brethren, that, notwithstanding the difficulties presented by the social habits of the people, strenuous attempts should be made by domiciliary visits, or by availing themselves of the usages of politeness, to reach single persons, such as the heads of families, and shopkeepers, the middle and artisan classes; and, in the quiet intercourse thus obtained, press home with affectionate earnestness the truth as it is in Jesus. Few of these classes of individuals are found mixed in the idle crowds which gather in the bazaar, or at the ghat, or the temple gate, while, from their habits, they are likely to listen with less prejudice than others to the message of life. All great moral and spiritual revolutions have usually had their origin, or found their strength in those classes of a people which are removed on the one hand from the pressure of poverty, and on the other from the ambition and pride of the higher ranks and more instructed body of the wealthy.
